National Stop on Red Week

The first week of August is National Stop on Red Week, reminding drivers of the dangers of running a red light. The Federal Highway Administration (FHA) established National Stop on Red Week in 1995 to educate the public about the importance of stopping at red lights. This event is a nationwide reminder that stopping at red lights isn't just about avoiding a ticket but protecting lives from the severity of traffic collisions. The week is also intended to encourage drivers to prioritize road safety and obey traffic laws.

In 2022, according to the Insurance Industry for Highway Safety (IIHS), red light running resulted in the deaths of 1,149 people, and the injury of an estimated 107,000 people. Half of those killed were pedestrians, bicyclists and people in other vehicles who were hit by the red-light runners.

What can you do to protect yourself and loved ones from red light runners? Intersections can be dangerous — when the light turns green, look in all directions for red-light runners before proceeding whether driving, cycling or walking. Don't race through a yellow light! Know that a yellow light at an intersection should last long enough that a vehicle traveling at the posted speed can either: apply the brakes and comfortably and safely decelerate to a stop prior to reaching the front of the intersection or maintain the same speed and safely clear the intersection.

This Stop on Red Week, let's commit to obeying speed limits so you have time and space to stop prior to entering the intersection. Decide now that you will always be prepared to Stop on Red.
